Criminal Law & Procedure

US v. Negron-Sostre, No. 10-1974

Convictions by jury as members of a sprawling drug conspiracy are vacated and remanded for a new trial where the complete exclusion of the public from jury selection infringed the defendants' Sixth Amendment rights.

Civil Rights, Constitutional Law, Injury & Tort Law

Fernandez-Salicrup v. Figueroa-Sancha, No. 14-1513

In a case under 42 U.S.C. section 1983 and analogous provisions of the Puerto Rico Civil Code's torts statute, that plaintiffs' Fourth, Fifth, Ninth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights were violated when plaintiff was unconstitutionally arrested and subjected to excessive force during an incident at a high school, the district court's judgment is: 1) affirmed as to exclusion of expert witness testimony, grant of summary judgment in favor of Supervisory Defendants, and dismissal with prejudice of Plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment excessive force claim against Rosado; and 2) reversed as to dismissal of the Fourth Amendment unconstitutional arrest claim against Rosado where plaintiff provided just enough evidence to establish a genuine dispute over two key material facts.
